There are a great multitude of people in all parts of the land who have entirely lost their health as a result of la grippe; who have recovered from an attack, but find themselves with riod. In Roger North's Examen, 1740 weakened nerves, deranged digestion, and with but very little of their former powers.

There is no disease known to man that leaves the system in such an outrageous and exasperating condi-

HOW SOME ANIMALS GROW.

Comparisons Between Young and Old of Various Species.

It is not generally known that the human baby is smaller at birth in proportion to the size it ultimately artains than most other animals.

The size of the young of any animai varies in proportion to the size of the brain, and is significant in many ways. The average height of a baby at birth is about twelve inches, and as the avermouth, a tenderness at the pit of the age height of a man is generally put stomach, a feeling of puffy fullness, down as 5 feet 10 inches, the proportion is as 1 to 5.83.

The young rhinoceros is 2 feet long when he is born, but when he grows up tion is always measured by the height the young one is about 2 feet high, and the average height of a mature elephant is 7 feet, so the proportions remain the same. The same relative measurements hold good in the case of Buy the young hippopotamus.

Incase of the deer we find that the young are 21/2 feet in height, while the full-grown deer is no more than 41/2 feet, or a proportion of 1 to 1.8. The giraffe's proportions are those of 1 to 3.3, for it is 11/2 feet tall at birth, and 6 feet when full grown.

A lion's cub at birth is about 8 inches long, while the grown-up Leo measures about 5 feet, or the enormous proportion of 1 to 7.5. The tiger's measurements are about the same, and so are those of Br'er Bear. The rapidity of In general, the larger the animal at
